Advanced Assessment: Interpreting Findings and Formulating Differential Diagnoses

Winner of the AJN 2006 Book of the Year Award!

Philadelphia, PA – Announced in the January 2007 issue of American Journal of Nursing (AJN), authors Mary Jo Goolsby and Laurie Grubbs received the AJN 2006 Book of the Year award in the category of Medical-Surgical Nursing.

Since 1969, the American Journal of Nursing has been publishing an annual list of the best in nursing publishing. Published in the January issue of the journal, the AJN Book of the Year program is a prestigious competition that garners the attention of its 342,000 readers, as well as librarians and faculty who are not subscribers. The most valuable texts of each year are chosen by AJN's panel of judges.

The judges noted that, “this volume aims to help the advanced practice nurse hone in on a most-likely diagnosis in a patient with a variety of signs and symptoms.”

Advanced Assessment: Interpreting Findings and Formulating Differential Diagnoses, is the only book directed specifically at assessing patients with a specific complaint—a perfect tool that can be applied in the classroom and as a working utility in clinical practice.

Unique in its approach, this new, first edition book takes users beyond the identification of physical assessment abnormalities to arrive at a differential diagnosis of the patient's health problem. Readers learn how to incorporate physical examination, patient history, and diagnostic studies to accurately diagnosis a patient's problem.
